Invites You to a Public Presentation

Topic: I'm Alive...What Now Canadians at the End of the World War I

Speaker: Major William March
Historian, RCAF History and Heritage

On the 100th Anniversary of the end of World War I, what did the soldiers and airmen face with the end of the war and the return to civilian life. The survivors faced a chaotic future; the desire to get home clashed with uncertainty. How would the family welcome them back? Would there be work? For the injured of mind and body—how would they be treated. Using personal examples, the speaker will weave a broad narrative of a Nation struggling to adjust to peace after four years of war.
